A Bellevue man, who works in a logging camp, last week ate some home-cured meat that was very heavily seasoned with garlic. Returning to the mill the next day, he spotted a skunk about 300 yards ahead of him. Inside of two seconds that skunk was dead.

Mrs. Dorthe Nielsen, M.P., joined Wendell Willkie in his attack on Prime Minister Winston Churchill. We wonder just what Dorthe feels like now when she reads some of her own anti-war speeches of a couple of years ago. Mrs. Nielsen is a clever platform woman and can be a danger to the well-being of the country if let run wild like she did at Medicine Hat. —Clareholm Local Press.

CANADIAN AID TO RUSSIA

In support of the Canadian Aid to Russia campaign, Mayor Williams and Robert Oakes, president of Blaimore Red Cross, have taken the initiative of proposing a committee of responsible citizens to work in Frank and Blaimore as a unit, to enable our people to express tangible appreciation of the heroic effort of the Russians, the unselfish sacrifices by the civilian population, the fighting qualities of the Red armies in the defence of their homeland, who have won the admiration of all the United Nations.

So let us, Canadians, give of our goods and money, that some of the suffering may be relieved in those sections that are daily being retaken by the Soviet forces.

It is asked that employers contact their employees and collect their subscriptions, that it may facilitate the work of the committee.

The following citizens are requested to act on campaign committees: Town of Frank—Mayor Donkin, V. Kusick, Joe Poch, V. J. Horejka; Blaimore—Mayor Williams, J. Danco, O. A. Botter, W. J. Bartlett, H. Pinkney, D. Ennis, J. Krkosky, M. Petrik, S. G. Bannan, and all others who may care to volunteer service. A meeting will be called soon.

JOHN LESKOSKY PASSES

The death of John Leskosky, senior, on Sunday, November 29th, at Pincher Creek hospital, caused much regret among his many friends. Having been ill for some time, he was removed to the hospital on Sunday morning, where he passed away within a few hours.

Surviving are his wife, Verona; four daughters and three sons, Sophie, Pauline, Verona, Annie, Michael, John and Thomas.

The remains were brought to Blaimore, where internment took place on Wednesday forenoon following service at St. Anne's church conducted by Rev. Dean M. A. Harrington.

RURAL EDITORS THANKED

Editor The Enterprise, Blaimore, Alberta.

Dear Sir: Now that the Third Victory Loan is past history, may I express to you the very sincere thanks of the Public Relations section for your efforts in helping to make this loan the success which it turned out to be.

Had it not been for your whole-hearted co-operation, I am quite sure that the results from rural points would not have been so gratifying as they were.

We know that in any future activities necessary to finance this war, we may count on your co-operation. Yours sincerely,

P. C. GALBRAITH,

Chairman Public Relations Section.

Probably unwillingly, looks as though many federal government employees are in line with a popular tune of the day in parody form: "I'm dreaming of a dry Christmas."

PERMITS NOT NEEDED FOR CERTAIN CLASS IFICATION WORKERS

National Selective regulations are being revised to permit retail trades and postal authorities to give temporary employment to male and female employees during the Christmas and New Year Season, under an order issued and approved by Labor Minister Mitchell, acting director.

Affected by the order are teachers and students during their Christmas vacation, men more than 50 years of age, women more than 44 years of age, and where there are more than sufficient women to meet requirements of high priority in given localities, women less than 45 years.

The order revised the regulation which requires permits to seek employment and seven days' notice on termination of employment. It is to be in force for the period December 13 to January 5 only.

Note: No person employed without permit pursuant to this order may continue in such employment without a permit after January 5, 1943. This relaxation will greatly relieve the labor situation necessary during the Christmas season.

The Outlook For Agriculture

WESTERN CANADA has just produced one of the largest crops in the history of this great wheat growing area. Of the 550,000,000 bushels said to have been harvested, the government has contracted to buy about 280,000,000 bushels. Because of the curtailment of world markets due to the war, much of this crop will not be moved for the present, and so far it has provided the farmers with many problems in the matters of securing help for the large scale harvesting operations, and in finding storage space for this large quantity of wheat. So far, this year's crop has not proved to be of great advantage to the farmer, but in a recent report on the agricultural situation in Canada, issued by the Bank of Nova Scotia, there are some interesting observations concerning the economic situation of the farmers now, and the outlook for agriculture in the next few months.

Cash Income Shows Increase

For Western Canada, the report predicts an increase in the farmer's cash income over that of the past year. This will be due partly to the increase in the price of wheat, and partly to expansion in the production of dairy and livestock products. For the whole of Canada, an increase of 15% over 1941 is expected in the farmer's cash income. This represents about $130,000,000, and would bring the farmer's cash income to over a billion dollars, for the first time since 1928. Higher cost of farm labor, and a higher price level for feed, offset some of the advantage of this increased income. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports an advance of more than 20% in the wages of day labor since 1941, and an advance of 30% in monthly wages in the same period. The total output for the farmer was not as great as the figures might indicate, however, since much less labor was hired at the higher wage rate. Labor conditions are considered to be at present unfavorable to the farmer. Figures recently issued by the Bank of Canada show that the supply of farm labor has decreased by 20% since the war began, and by 9% in the past year. This situation has been relieved somewhat by the recruiting of harvest help from the cities, and by women assuming a greater amount of farm work. There has been noted too, an increase in the amount of machinery purchased by farmers. In 1941 over $2,000,000 worth of machinery was purchased in excess of the amount purchased in 1940. Of this, $1,000,000 was for dairy equipment.

A Shortage Of Skilled Labor

In spite of all this there is a serious shortage of skilled farm labor, and it is hoped that possibly this situation may shortly be rectified through the operation of Selective Service. In summing up the report states that despite the labor shortage, the demands of the home market have increased greatly in the past months, yet acute shortages of farm products have been averted. At the same time contracts of unprecedented size are being fulfilled for Britain and for the armed forces here and abroad. In maintaining production on this scale, the agricultural industry is indeed playing a major role in the winning of the war.

Non-Essential Foods In The Diet

The luncheon or supper meal can be a very attractive one, full of the necessary food elements, if the proper care is exercised in preparation and planning beforehand. Too many people serve the usual slab of cold meat and potato salad without any attempt whatsoever to make this meal appealing, wholesome and well-balanced.

Children coming boisterously in after school is out, there appetites fairly shouting for plenty of good, wholesome food, should be served a meal which will restore their energies they have expended and build firm healthy bones and tissue. Sausages and fried potatoes followed by doughnuts and jam for a filler may sound rather nice to the average child, but, though expensive foods, they do not contain nearly enough vitamins and minerals so necessary to the growing body. So much fried food, too, is difficult to digest.

Following are two types of lunches. A comparison will show at once what is meant.

HIGH VALUE LUNCH

Baked Lima Beans
Toasted Whole Wheat Cheese Sandwich
Carrot and Celery Salad
Apples or Applesauce and Cream

LOW VALUE LUNCH

Fried Sausage and Potatoes
Stewed Tomatoes
White Bread and Butter
Doughnuts and Jam
Tea

The high value lunch shows imagination in planning, is nicely balanced with no preponderance of any one type of food as is the low value lunch, and consists of food containing the essential vitamins and minerals. The children, too, will enjoy this kind of meal much more.

Gloomy Forecast

Doctor Says That Tooth Decay Is Inherited

Dr. T. A. Hardgrove, Fond du Lac, Wis., dentist, made a gloomy forecast for babies in the October issue of the Journal of the American Dental Association.

If their parents have toothaches, they probably will, too, Hardgrove said.

"Tendencies to tooth decay may be inherited along with the type of glandular mechanism of the parents," he said.

His studies have shown that all the phenomena of tooth decay are "endocrine manifestations" and that "we inherit our tendencies to dental decay because we inherit the endocrine mechanism to a large extent."

"In families, we frequently find decay in the same areas of the same teeth," he said.

Automobile Care

To Keep Your Car Running Avoid Battery Abuse

As time goes on the care of present automobiles assumes first line importance. As tires wear out and gasoline ration coupons are used up, the car must be given attention, Consumer Information Service points out.

If car owners in town and country will exercise common sense the life of the car's battery, which is a very important consideration, will be extended. Needless starting should be avoided. Some people have the bad habit of not looking for the cause of starting trouble until the battery has been exhausted.

Periodic battery inspection and filling should be done by a reputable service station. It is advisable to have the battery checked once a week at the same time as air is put into the tires and other check-ups are being made.

Car owners should make certain that nothing is added to the battery solution but approved water, unless it has been thoroughly established that some electrolyte has been lost.

It is a good idea to glance at the ammeter on the car's dashboard occasionally, and if it shows "discharge" during the daytime or is not operating at all, an immediate call at the service station is suggested.

Woman Paper-Hanger

Seventy-Year-Old Ontario Woman Proud Of Her Trade

The war-time girl has proven herself capable of handling many jobs supposed to be for men only, but 70-year-old Mrs. Edward Newton, of Morning's Mills, Ont., has been hanging paper and painting houses for the last 30 years and is proud of her trade. Says Mrs. Newton, "I find the work just as easy now as I ever did and expect to carry on indefinitely." Mrs. Newton started as a professional paperhanger and painter 30 years ago when she married and until the death of her husband three years ago, she was his assistant. After Mr. Newton's death she continued with the business and almost any day may be seen atop a ladder painting or deftly hanging paper.

NEWS of your Army

From Directorate of Public Relations Army

Private Mary Smith enlisted in the C.W.A.C. early in October. She had been a linotype operator, and while anxious to do her part, was puzzled as to what place she could have in the Army. She was tested and during the course of the interview it was discovered that she had had high school education and that her job in civilian life had required a high degree of speed and accuracy. These factors, together with Pte. Smith's quiet, pleasant manner suggested to the Army Examiner that she would be best suited to a job requiring manual dexterity and tact in dealing with people. Now Pte. Smith is happily training to be a dental chair assistant.

Jean Brown is another newcomer to the ranks of the Canadian Women's Army Corps. When she enlisted, she thought her place might be as a cook. The Personnel Selection officer who interviewed her found out by careful questioning that she had worked in the Wrens in England during the last war and had had a great deal of experience in handling ratings as well as in actual cooking. She has now been placed in a large centre as senior cook and assistant to the messing officer, where her practical experience is being put to good use.

Keystone Of Army

This all-important matter of fitting round pegs into round holes is one which is occupying the attention of experts in the Directorate of Personnel Selection in the Canadian Active Army. This Directorate in Ottawa, working under the Adjutant-General and directed by Colonel W. Line, comprises a staff of practical men and women whose qualifications, in addition to careful military training and personnel work include applied psychology. Throughout Canada 211 officers called Army Examiners are engaged in this branch of work which has been called the keystone of the Army and has been responsible for "fitting" the new arrivals in the Army into a few broad groupings with respect to their ability to learn quickly the duties of a soldier.

The first C.W.A.C. training centre to try out the new idea was Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, P.Q. and now it is being successfully carried out at No. 3 C.W.A.C. Basic Training Centre, Kitchener, Ont., and at Vermilion, Alberta. Every person at the training centre is given a special test and is personally interviewed by one of the officers. This work is done as soon as possible after the recruit arrives in order that the results may be used in placing the volunteer with a minimum loss of time.

Experts At Work

Working on the principle that "the right man or woman in the right place can mean a battle won, and that the wrong man or woman in the wrong job can cause untold confusion and delay," Colonel Line and his staff are giving serious thought to the selection of the group responsible for the smooth-working of the personnel selection service. Army Examiners realize that there is no substitute for actually trying out the man or woman on the job whenever that is possible. But when it is a matter of classifying very large numbers of individuals the job of trying out becomes impossible.

Many Millions Saved Through Price Control

Ottawa—Canada's price control regulations have been credited with saving residents of the Dominion over eight million dollars during the past year.

The eight million dollars represents economies in the nation's war costs and savings to the Canadian housewife.

Summing up the results of the price control regulations at the end of the first 10 months of the current year, a British United Press report pointed out that the cost of living in the Dominion has only risen two points during the present war as compared with 10 points for a comparable period during the 1914-1918 struggle.

The price control plan is a year old on Dec. 1 and observers through the world are agreed that, in the main, it has been a highly successful phase of the Canadian war effort.

During the 1914-1918 war the cost of living in Canada doubled, but it is expected that under the price ceilings now in effect, the rise in costs during the present conflict will be held down to a fraction of the gain in the great war.

Reliable sources said that regulations under the scheme have already forced nearly 600 business firms to close down. And they say that the factor has itself contributed to the war effort by releasing more men for war industries and the armed services.

Wheat Problem In The West And Future Policy

Calgary—Canada's production of wheat since the outbreak of war has amounted to almost two billion bushels, George Melvor, chairman of the wheat board, told delegates to the 20th annual meeting of the Alberta wheat pool.

He reviewed the entire wheat and coarse grain handling problem as it affected quota establishment and possible future policy.

Of the two billion bushels produced, he continued, because of a market restricted to the United Kingdom, only about 900,000,000 bushels had been exported and the balance had either been consumed locally or was now in storage.

No voices, he said, had been raised so far, protesting the fact that inevitably, very large stocks of wheat would have to be carried in Canada as long as the war remained in the present phase and equally, it had been generally accepted that under the circumstances, producers should receive a substantial measure of protection.

A problem which he said had given the board some difficulty, he emphasized, was that it had not at any time been known and was not known today, the volume of coarse grains to be marketed in the west this year.

"Our experience to date indicates that coarse grain marketing will be relatively light in Alberta and for this reason the board is increasing wheat delivery quotas as rapidly as possible."

Every endeavor, he stated, was being made day by day, and week by week to ease the storage situation at the delivery points with the lowest delivery quotas, and it was important for producers to know that where a quota was raised up to ten bushels per acre it did not hurt the position of the place with the low quota as more cars were immediately routed to the latter point.

Rather than risk the loss of any orders or markets, he warned, grain would be moved from points with the high quotas, the policy was to fill demand even at the risk of temporary inequalities.

Referring to the marketing of oats and barley, he said that after other demands were met there had still been a place for marketing barley and so the board had permitted over deliveries of this grain.

More than 6,000,000 bushels of flax, he informed the delegates had now been shipped from the country elevator and was being marketed satisfactorily to mills both in Canada and the United States.

"A lot of careful thought will go into the preparation of the 1943-44 policy and there is a great need of patience and tolerance while awaiting the announcement of the program," Mr. Melvor concluded.

GRAIN INSURANCE

Provision Made For War Risk Insurance On Grain In Storage
Ottawa.—Finance Minister Healey announced that provision has been made for the war risk insurance of grain in commercial storage.

"The premium will be collected by means of a levy on stocks in store in certain elevators on Nov. 30, 1942, and upon the movement of grain through terminal elevators thereafter," the minister's statement said. "Coverage will be provided on a blanket basis, compensation, being payable to owners of grain in licensed elevators, in flour mills, in plants for the manufacture of grain products and in transit in respect of war damage occurring on and after Dec. 1, 1942."

The board of grain commissioners has been given responsibility for collection of the levy of $1.50 per 1,000 bushels on wheat, and "proportionate amounts" on other grains.

Mr. Healey said this type of blanket coverage was found most satisfactory in view of the way in which grain is handled in Canada. The scheme was prepared after consultation with various interests concerned.

CANNOT GET OUT

Italy Dominated By Germany And Must Keep On Fighting
Norfolk, Va.—Lord Halifax asserted he had no doubt that Italy "would like to get out of the war, but Germany won't let her do that."

There is no love lost between Italy and Germany, the British ambassador told a press conference, and the effect of this feeling "will place an added strain on Hitler's war machine."

Italy "is not a free country and you will see her become more and more a German-occupied country," he said.

ALASKA HIGHWAY

Interest In The Future Settlement Possibilities In North
Edmonton.—Unfolding of new frontiers in the far north through opening of the Alaska highway is creating wide interest in United States over the future settlement possibilities of northern Alberta and the vast region lying north of the province.

Mr. Dan E. C. Campbell, director of publicity for the provincial government, said here.

A big trek to Edmonton and northward is indicated by the growing volume of inquiries received by the publicity department.

Since June, between 800 and 1,000 inquiries have been received. Many of these were applications for information material including maps, folders and general data in regard to farming, and available lands, particularly in the Peace River district.

He said it was also significant that many of the inquiries were from potential settlers in the country served by the new Alaskan highway while a smaller number came from possible tourists.

Historic New Alcan Highway Opened In Record Time

BRIG.-GEN. O'CONNOR

WILL GET SHARE

Small Retailer Will Have Opportunity To Obtain Available Goods
Ottawa.—Speaking to a retail trade delegation, Donald Gordon, the chairman of the wartime prices and trade board, stated that the small retailer will have equal opportunity to obtain his share of the available goods. The price board chairman denied that the government has plans for the elimination of thousands of retail outlets.

Presenting an historic occasion, ceremonies dedicating the new Canada-Alaska highway, near the Alaska-Yukon boundary line. A feat of almost unsurpassed engineering skill, the road is considered one of the world's wonders. Started on March 12 of this year it was completed long ahead of its schedule. The highway extends 1,671 miles from Dawson Creek to Fairbanks, Alaska, and has opened up a whole new territory. It was hewn out of the wilderness by 10,000 soldiers and 2,000 civilian workmen. Brig.-Gen. J. A. O'Connor, left, is officer commanding the U.S. army's Northwest Service Command and builder of the Alaskan highway. Dr. Charles Camsehl, commissioner of the Northwest Territories, right. Pensioner Minister MacKenzie represented the Canadian government at the opening ceremonies. E. L. Bartlett, secretary of state for Alaska, also officiated at the ceremonies.

War Equipment Produced Here Used In Libya

Winnipeg.—Munitions Minister Howe said here that the Allied forces in the Battle of Libya and Egypt fought almost wholly on Canadian mechanized equipment. Munitions output in the next year is expected to be stepped up by $1,000,000,000, he said.

A gun is produced in Canada every minute of the day, the minister said, adding that Canada is making eight types of artillery guns, field guns, 14 types of small arms, aircraft guns and rifles. "In every minute of the week 40,000 finished rounds of ammunition are being produced," he said.

Canada now is going into production of bigger planes, he said, adding that plans are underway for production of three Mosquito planes a day and "we hope to be in substantial production of Lancaster bombers next spring." The "Hell-diver" which Mr. Howe described as the latest of dive bombers, also will be in production early in the new year, he said.

In addition to corvettes, mine-sweepers and other naval craft, Mr. Howe said "we hope to deliver a finished destroyer soon of 100 per cent. Canadian manufacture." He said 87 10,000-ton merchant ships had been constructed in Canadian shipyards in addition to several 5,000-ton ships.

Production of motorized vehicles has increased 10 times since the start of the war and during 1942 "we will have built 2,400 motorized vehicles."

Spawning of tank output, Mr. Howe said the Valentine tank production is three a day and war plants have delivered more than 1,000 Ram tanks.

The minister described research work that led to establishment of an optical glass industry in Ontario which he said now is producing telescopes, periscopes, gun-sights, bomb-sights and secret radio equipment. "More than $40,000,000 is being spent to produce artificial rubber," Mr. Howe said.

IN ENEMY HANDS

Prominent French Patriots Reported Handed Over To Nazis
At The French Frontier.—Former Premier Paul Reynaud, former Minister Georges Mandel, and probably five other former French leaders including Gen. Maurice Gamelin, have been, or are about to be, given into German hands, reliable sources said.

According to the most authentic information, Reynaud and Mandel, captives since the fall of France, have been transferred from their prison fortress in the Pyrenees to Bordeaux, ostensibly for safe keeping but actually as a step to being handed over to the Nazis.

This was said to be largely the result of a letter Reynaud wrote to Marshal Henri Petain, protesting the appearance of German troops around his prison. Reynaud told Petain this was objectionable, and that he was "taking note of the state of affairs for future settlement."

With Reynaud and Mandel, according to well-informed French sources, are Gen. Gamelin, former Premier Edouard Daladier, former Premier Leon Blum, Pierre Jacomet, former administrator of the national defence ministry, and former Air Minister Guy la Chambre, the latter moved from internment near Vichy.

The Nazis, these sources said, want Reynaud because in 1940, while still premier, he advocated transferring the government to North Africa to continue resistance, and Mandel because he wanted to organize a government in Africa after the armistice.

GERMANS MUTINY

Report Says Nazis In Norway Have Been Arrested
London.—The Norwegian telegraph agency said that reports from Norway continued to tell of mutiny among the occupying German troops.

German officers and men in chains were said to have been seen on ships which put into Norwegian ports on the way south.

"The agency also reported that German firing squads had refused to shoot their comrades charged with mutiny. It said that in Narvik German mutineers and a firing squad which refused to shoot them were lined up for execution by a second squad, but that it, too, refused to fire. All were said to have been sent south for punishment."

Canada Doubles Lumber Exports To United States

Ottawa.—Timber Controller Alan H. Williamson announced that shipments of Canadian lumber to the United States this year will approximate 1,300,000,000 board feet, or more than double the corresponding exports to that country in any year from 1932 to 1940 inclusive.

In answer to statements made to the United States senate committee investigating the war program, Mr. Williamson said that despite a labor shortage and consequent falling off in timber production throughout Canada, the exports to the United States this year will probably be greater by a small margin than they were in 1941.

The controller drew attention to a statement made to the U.S. committee that an alleged embargo on the export of British Columbia Douglas fir logs would adversely affect the American war effort.

"Actually," he said, "the exports of such logs normally have represented less than one per cent of the log production in Oregon and Washington. They are thus seen to be so small as to have no effect, one way or the other, on the American war program."

"The Canadian timber control has been working closely with the war production board to assure adequate supplies for the United States war effort, even at the cost of denying ourselves lumber we badly needed," said Mr. Williamson.

"The joint policy of the W.P.B. and our control has been to see that logs are sorted and sawn into types of lumber most urgently required, and that the lumber is channelled into the types in order of priority, taking into consideration, at all times, the war requirements of both countries."

He explained that exports of logs and lumber to the United States are subject to permit.

"By employing this permit system, we are assisting the W.P.B. in making sure that lumber does not get into the hands of non-essential users. The export permit system thus supplements our control, which prevents non-essential users in Canada from purchasing lumber needed in the joint program."

"That our Canadian control is proving effective is shown in the fact that, despite a continuing rise in the per capita consumption in this country is only two-thirds of what it is in the United States."

Mr. Williamson said that if any export permits have been refused it is only because the lumber was desperately needed for the Canadian war effort.

FEW ARE GRANTED

Although Many Apply For Exit Permits To Work Elsewhere
Ottawa.—National selective service officials said they have approved only 15 per cent of the 400 applications for labor exit permits received since Oct. 20 when, by order-in-council, permits were made necessary for Canadians leaving the country to work elsewhere.

Among the 85 per cent refused permits were a number of skilled workers who were considered needed for war work in Canada. They included doctors, nurses and other professional and technical men and women.

The 15 per cent who were granted permits included a few men and women who wanted to join their families outside Canada, some key men and workmen needed in the production of war materials outside the country, girls going abroad to be married, and students completing courses in universities outside Canada.

The 400 figure did not include a number of persons like government officials, persons in ill-health and others who are exempt from the regulations. It also did not include several hundred lumber workers who wanted to work in the New England woods during the winter but who were required at home.

In a number of cases officials said, persons have completely arranged to leave Canada and have been stopped at the border because they had failed to obtain labor exit permits.

London.—The admiralty has announced that Britain had passed 3,000 freighters in convoy through the 20-mile-wide Strait of Dover in the last two years in the face of German bombers and fighters and powerful guns mounted on the French coast.

It said the channel mobile balloon barrage flotilla contained 227,000 miles protecting the ships from aircraft.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE TO REMEDY THIS

The war is taking more from the small towns than other parts of Canada. The proportion of men from the towns and villages in the armed services is beyond the national average, because of their lack of essential war industries. The section of war and defense plants is making many places communities of middle-aged adults and children.

Skilled workers, both men and women, have gone east and west to the promised land of high wages (although at Kitchener, Ontario, formerly Berlin, they apparently chafe).

The small town, while short of help, could not afford opportunities enough to hold them. Merchants are disturbed over the future, with fewer people to work in the stores, fewer people to buy, and fewer things to sell.

But the small town morale is high. Victory Loan campaigns have gone over the top; women are doing Red Cross work and helping on salvage and rationing committees. We have all been brought closer together by the war and it has made us realize the responsibilities of neighborliness.

The small town has given far more hostages to the war than it has received in return.

The mass shift of population east and west causes an emptiness that can only be relieved by the establishment of industries in the prairie provinces.—Shaunvion Standard.

HATING THE GERMANS

It is hard to think what brutalities the Germans have committed to untold thousands of people, and still not hate them. Yet there are some who insist that it is a mistake to do any hating in this war.

In all the world's history, no nation has committed such acts of horror against so many people. The barbarian armies of earlier times did ruthless things. They thought nothing of annihilating the conquered enemy. But the Germans have added the genius of the scientist to their blood-lust and sadism. The result has been torture and death to unfortunates who have fallen into their power, on a scale such as history has never before recorded.

The allied powers decently gave the Germans a chance after the last war. But the intervening years were used to prepare for another war and another attempt to enslave the world. And the methods now being utilized exceed in ferocity and brutality anything that was done in the last war.

The German nation has earned the hatred of the world. They cannot escape punishment for their manifold crimes.—Brooks Bulletin.

The teacher was trying to explain the meanings of certain words to her class. She came to "sufficient."

"Now," she said brightly, "suppose there was a cat here and I gave it a saucerful of milk, which it drank. Then I gave it another saucerful, and it drank it all. But when I gave it a third it would only drink half of it. We can then say that the cat had had sufficient. Now, Tommy, what is the meaning of 'sufficient'?"

"Please, teacher," said Tommy eagerly, "a cat full of milk."

LETTERS FOUND ON DEAD GERMANS

In the current issue of American Magazine, Maurice Hindus, send a wireless from Moscow telling of the letters which have been gathered from German dead on the battlefields of the East. "These letters," says the writer, "were voices from the living, inside Germany. They were intimate and personal, and the outstanding feature is that 85% of all these letters completely ignore politics. Perhaps this is why military censorship is so lenient. Even when the writer speaks frankly of hardships there are few deletions."

The writer speaks of the many references to the deterioration of morals of German women, despite the doctrine of race purity, and he quotes letters referring to the familiarity with those of other nationality.

"So while Germans by the thousands die daily for racial supremacy, and blood purity, their women at home, despite ideology and the Gestapo, indulge in no small amount of race defilement. That's one reason, no doubt, why German mothers and fathers show increasing anxiety at the foreignization of Germany through presence of millions of alien laborers and war prisoners."

"Berlin, says one father, has become an international city, with every language heard on the street, and Vienna is no better. In that city are Italians, Spaniards, Hungarians, Slovaks, Czechs, Greeks, Bulgars."

"Most of the letters are full of complaints. Religious people feel hurt because the church bells have been melted into cannon. One letter tells that old people are refused medical examination and women incapable of bearing more children are no longer useful."

"Tommy (the B.A.R.) is to Germans the supreme villain. They hate him and fear him, and nothing seems to exasperate them so much as an air raid. In the German Ruhr, Germans are particularly unmoved by the air raids, as the letter discloses."

"Their sorrows and bereavements weigh heavily on the Germans. They want the war to end, and the Russians' violent resistance is as unexpected as it is painful to German people. Letters, still unopened, found on dead bodies, speak thus: 'Nothing in the world could make me want to spend another winter in Russia. We hope the war with Russia will end.'

"It's amazing how many German women ask for parcels from Russia, including clothes. That these clothes are filched from the meagre wardrobes of peasants doesn't seem to matter. One woman writes: 'Don't forget me and the children. I'll be specially grateful for smoked pork and soap. Find woollens somewhere for me and the children.' And the German soldiers don't ignore such requests. It is told that in winter they stripped children of furs and woollens which they sent back to Germany."

From home, German soldiers receive letters of gratitude for fine cheap workers coming from Russia. One bride writes: 'We'll have three Ukrainian girls to work in the house and gardens. Those with Russian help say it is no expensive luxury.'

"Information in letter found on German dead leads to striking deductions. The people inside Germany hate the war and want it to end. They lament the moral disintegration of their young women; shudder at air raids; weep over their dead. But nowhere do they betray the least suggestion of German guilt or regret for horrors which the German armies perpetrate on conquered countries. Hard as their belief is, they know neither starvation nor desperation, nor do they expect Germany to lose the war. To expect them at this time to revolt against Hitler is as futile as to expect the Fuehrer to live up to his promises of the treaties he signs."

THE WOMEN IN MASTER DRILL

For the first time in the history of the Royal Canadian Air Force, a precision squadron of members of the Women's Division have toured the Dominion. During the past week the squadron, which has completed basic training at No. 7 "M" Depot, Rockville, Ontario, have exhibited precision drill at a number of centres in No. 4 Training Command, and on each occasion their amazing display has drawn the highest comment from air force officials and from the press. After witnessing the display, an officer who is a drill instructor, remarked: "I had no idea that women could master drill so thoroughly and present it so smartly."

After a few preliminary orders, the girls, who half from all parts of Canada, went through 138 movements of drill without a word of command—and without the slightest suggestion of a hitch.

During the demonstration, Flight Sergeant F. C. Lawrence, a Kamloops, B.C., girl, took charge. A diminutive miss, her audiences have wondered how she could possibly sound so much like an army sergeant-major. With her deep-voiced commands, she has been one of the big hits of the show.

At the conclusion of the tour, these girls will disband and commence trade training, which, when completed, will enable them to release men for more active services. Another group of girls will then be assembled to form the next women's division precision squadron.

Members of the armed Forces and civilians alike have been thrilled by the girls' precise drill, and the fact that there is a place in the Royal Canadian Air Force for keen young women is emphatically pronounced.

A STATEMENT
BUTTER

In spite of the fact that in some Canadian cities butter supplies recently have not been sufficient to meet the greatly increased demands, the situation does not constitute an emergency; nor is it as serious as some people seem to think. There are two main causes for these temporary and local shortages:

For the past year we have been consistently using 10% to 15% more butter than in normal times—with consequent disturbance to the distribution of our butter supplies.

Many people have been buying more butter than they currently need.

The limited nature of the present shortage is shown by the fact that if every home would reduce its consumption of butter by only one ounce per person per week (for the average home this means a quarter of a pound a week)—or if we reduced our national consumption to the peacetime rate—the shortage would soon disappear.

There is no Reason for Panic Buying

It is unpatriotic and unnecessary for housewives to rush out to beat their neighbors to the nearest grocery store. Butter will not be rationed to meet the present situation. Butter production is actually above normal for this time of year. The Board itself is taking special action which it is believed will speedily restore normal supplies in retail stores.

HOW TO SAVE BUTTER

AT MEAL-TIME

1. Use butter only for spreading on bread.
2. Never use butter just out of the refrigerator. Wait until it is soft enough to spread easily.
3. Add a small amount of milk when creaming butter for sandwiches.

IN COOKING

1. Do not use butter in baking and cooking when hard, shortening or meat dripping can be used.
2. Use level measurements of butter. . . Guesswork means waste.
3. When adding cheese to a cream or white sauce, use only half amount of butter stated in recipe.
4. Use paper wrappings from butter to grease baking dishes.
5. Do not use butter for re-heating vegetables.
6. Serve meat gravy to avoid the use of extra butter on potatoes.
7. When adding butter to vegetable dishes, add it sparingly. Do not melt it and then pour.

Scrupulously avoid waste and extravagance. Waste is wrong at all times. In time of war it is sabotage.

Reduce present consumption of butter by at least one ounce per person per week—for the average home this means a quarter of a pound a week.)

Do not buy more than is needed for immediate use.

Problem Will Remain

Youth of Germany Has Been Steeped In Nazi Doctrine

Anthony Eden is the latest to call attention to the problem of Germany in any post-war settlement. "One problem," he said, "we shall have to face—the most sinister of all—is Germany. Hitler isn't an accident. He is a symptom. Let none forget that in kind and generous moments after the war." Mr. Eden said the problem of Germany would remain "because Hitler inculcated his terrible doctrine into the young people of Germany."

John D. Rockefeller Was Steady Customer In New York Shop
A gray-haired, modestly dressed figure slipped into a tiny book shop in one of New York's quiet side streets, browsed briefly, made a purchase and walked out.

"Isn't that John D. Rockefeller?" asked a pop-eyed customer.
"It is," said the proprietor, "but I've never pretended to recognize him in all the years he has bought books here. Mr. Rockefeller prefers it that way."

"And what does he buy—biography, history?" queried the customer.

"Neither. Mr. Rockefeller usually asks for a good detective story."

Thou Shalt Not, Colossians 3:5-11. Put away your sins, counsels Paul, your impurity, covetousness, all those sins which draw down the wrath of God. Put away anger, wrath, malice, railing, shameful speaking, lying, for the old self has been discarded and the new self has been put on, which is being renewed in the image of the Creator. In such a new nature there can be no distinction of race, religion, nor position, for Christ is all and in all the relations of life.

Death waves a beckoning finger at the motorist who tries to beat the train to the railway crossing, and the engineer, whose train can't swerve or dodge, is helpless to avert the impending tragedy. Trying to beat the train to the crossing is still one of the most prevalent causes of crossing accidents, of which 219 occurred during the first eight months of 1942, exactly the same figure as for the corresponding period of 1941. Human folly is still responsible for nearly all of these accidents.

Explanations and Comments

New Life in Christ, Colossians 3:1-4. These verses are paraphrased by the One Volume Commentary thus: Seeing then that at your conversion you showed not Christ's death only but his resurrection, go on to participate in his heavenly life, in that heaven where he is, and where sits at God's right hand. Let your whole thought be set on heavenly, not on earthly, things. For you died with Christ, and your life in union with him is a hidden life in God. It is not always to remain hidden, for at Christ's second coming it will be revealed for Christ is our very life, so that his manifestation involves ours.

When one has given himself to Christ as his follower, his conduct is lifted to a higher level. "It is lived for and by eternal, not temporal values. Yet this does not mean a vague 'spirituality,' indifferent to the practical issues of daily life on earth—as Paul sufficiently shows in the following ethical section. For the eternal values are defined for us by Christ, as the unseen world is for us the world where Christ is supreme. If we are 'in Christ,' then our 'hidden life' is in that world. It is a 'real life,' its meaning half-frustrated at present by the intractability of our material environment; but it is real, and one day when all that is material has passed away, it will be revealed—manifested—as the only real life there is" (C. H. Dodd).

Put away anger, wrath, malice, railing, shameful speaking, lying, for the old self has been discarded and the new self has been put on, which is being renewed in the image of the Creator. A Word For England

Troops Headed By A British General Turns The Tables

It has become quite the fashion in this country to laud General Rommel as the outstanding military leader of the war, yet the quiet and undramatic General Montgomery has achieved a victory such as Field Marshal Rommel never did. He has dislodged a powerful and elite force from a strongly defended position and hurled back that force in complete rout.

England it was that in the dark days after Dunkerque held the fort against Hitler until America could get ready and Russia could get into the war. England it was that out-fought the Germans in the air when the invasion of the British Isles seemed imminent.

Now that the turning point seems to have come in the war, it is England's troops, headed by a British general, who have turned the table.

This is indeed England's day.—Watertown, N.Y., Times.

A travelling salesman returning from a particularly unsuccessful trip told his sales manager: "If Hitler still wants more territory, he can have mine."

HALFWAY HOUSE

— BY —

MICHAEL TRENT

CHAPTER VIII

Ann returned to Halfway House shortly after midnight and found the guests gathered on the verandah to watch the spectacle. The fire was at the far end of the lake, five miles away, yet it seemed very near. They could see a wall of flame, crackling with the roar of sound carried to them on a steady breeze, and the acid smell of smoke was in the air they breathed. There was an awareness of danger; noticeably, the lake was working southward toward the hotel.

Ann tried to reassure the others, telling them that the blaze had been discovered in time and that it was already being fought. She wanted them to believe they were in no danger at Halfway House.

"How relieving to know we're safe. I suppose your ranger friends are fighting the fire for us like heroes," Rhea Marshall said.

"I wouldn't say they are doing it for us. I assume they are mostly concerned with saving the timber. They know we can leave if necessary."

"I'd rather think they were being heroes for us," said the dark girl. Her eyes had a sultry look.

"Wouldn't you, Miss Lowry?"

Ann smiled, saying nothing. She was unable to understand the girl's veiled sarcasm or her deliberate reference to the rangers. It was Rhea's aunt, Mrs. Leland, who answered.

"Draw in those claws, Rhea," she said sharply. "You're too good at being catty. You have Miss Lowry at a disadvantage."

Rhea said "Borry" with a narrowing look at Ann. She was mostly concerned with the doorway. She made a picture; she was in a white evening dress, and there about her head and shoulders was a wreath of red, and her beauty with a casualness. In the doorway she paused for a moment, her voice still had that velvet-covered barb.

"By the way," said "where is Mr. Blake?" I haven't seen him about since dinner."

Her manner made it appear that she spoke to the gathering, but her glance rested on Ann. Then, without awaiting an answer, she turned and went inside. Anne watched her cross the lobby and mount the stairs, knowing now that the girl had heard that conversation between her and her. More, Rhea seemed to know what that conversation had meant—and wanted Anne to know it.

Eric's secret wasn't a secret any longer. Anne was frightened. She went inside to find her father. Dr. Lowry was resting in the office off the lobby.

"Eric," he said, in reply to her question. "I really don't know where he is. I haven't seen him about all evening." His pale, tired face showed concern. "You don't think he has left?"

And Ann said, "I almost hope he has. Yes, I do hope he has!"

The fire burned on. Men converged upon the Indian Lake watershed from lumber camp and town, from mountain cabin and ranch. It was 3 o'clock when Eric Kruger showed up. Anne was switching off the lobby lights when he entered.

His face and hands were smoke blackened, his clothes were soiled and torn, and somewhere he had lost coat and tie. His eyes were red-rimmed, and he looked physically all in as he sank into a chair. Anne saw him smile; she did not return it.

"Eric, where have you been?"

"To the fire, Anne. I have been working like a machine."

"You were there helping?"

"Yes. Don't look so surprised. Anne wasn't surprised. She knew if her face showed anything it was alarm. "You shouldn't have been there," she said. "Not among all those men. The rangers—"

Eric made a weary gesture. "They were too busy to notice me. They asked no questions."

"There are people who know about you," she said.

"Ah, your Steve Hayes has found out. That went to your mind tonight against my wishes, and you told him about me."

"That isn't true, Eric. But there is a man who saw you hide in the station wagon that night in Sand Flat. A disreputable man named Jud. He came here tonight, and I had to pay him to not go to the sheriff."

Eric no longer slumped in the chair. He sat erect, his hands gripped the chair arms, and his begrimed face had a look of defiance.

"He will not tell so long as you pay him," he said. "But he will want to be paid over my head, and I can't have you paying blackmail for me. I shall go away, Anne. If I leave tonight, the fire will help cover my going."

"Eric, you'll catch up to him. You'll not get far."

He rose and faced her, his reddened eyes looking at her in a wistful way. "You were right, Eric," he asked. Then, at once: "It is useless to say it, but I would like you to know. Anne, that I would be honored to have you as my wife. If your love for this Steve Hayes should—"

"Don't, please, Eric," she interrupted him.

He smiled thinly. "I shall make for Venezuela after Mexico," he said. "You will find me at Caracas, if you search for me." He moved slowly across the darkened lobby. At the stairs he paused. "I am dead on my feet," he said. "I think I must sleep a few hours before I start." And he went heavily up the stairs.

They talked it over in the morning. Eric and Anne—Eric and Anne and her father. Eric's stubborn mind was made up; he would try to reach friends in Mexico, and no amount of argument would deter him.

His father put his hand on Eric's shoulder. "Eric, I haven't you thought of all I've said. Can't you see that in a way it isn't playing the game fair to attempt to escape? If you believed in what you fought for, each po might be a part of the game."

Eric shook off the older man's hand. "I am not a believer in playing the game fair," he said curtly. "That is a stupid belief of your English friends. I mean to play my way—and play for myself!"

"You refuse my advice, then?"

"Absolutely, Herr Lowry. If you resent it, perhaps you will send for Eric, perhaps you will send for me."

"Eric, Eric," Anne said. "Don't talk like that after we've tried to be your friends. We cannot help it if we do not see matters as you do. But his sudden anger was beyond her appeasement. His face was flushed, his eyes were coldly blazing. Stiffly, he said, "I appreciate your friendliness. But I cannot accept your advice. I mean to leave at once."

"Eric, for your own sake I think it would be best if we sent for the police," she said. And she saw that make hurt replace the anger in his eyes. "Oh, Eric, think it over. At least you must wait until tonight. Please, Eric."

Slowly, the stiffness went out of him. "Very well, Anne. What you ask, I cannot refuse. But—tonight I go."

Smoke still wafted skyward in black puffs from the burned timber, but the fire was out, and the afternoon brought rain in a steady downpour, which ended all danger of the blaze breaking out again.

The rain kept the people at Halfway House indoors all Sunday; all business, who ventured out in their smart yellow car during the afternoon. Something had worked a change in the girl, she seemed to have a sudden case of nerves.

Ann was aware of three guests that evening who appeared restless and on edge. The first was a displeased-looking Margaret Leland played bridge, but she also kept watching her niece in a close and frowning way. Rhea Marshall, Anne saw, sat curled up on a settee by a window, staring out through the rain-splattered panes. That it was too dark for her to see outside apparently mattered not at all; there was merely staring moodily into space.

The third person taking no part in the card playing or conversation was Eric Kruger. He sat slumped in an armchair, smoking cigarette after cigarette, chin dropped, and his broad square face was grim.

Steve Hayes arrived shortly before 10 o'clock. Anne went to admit him when she heard his car drive up.

Bring Sun To Children Via Vitamin D

Steve took off raincoat and campaign hat, tossed them into a chair, then turned and took her in his arms. They were alone in the lobby. He kissed her.

"I'm late, honey, but it couldn't be helped. We took the something at the fire last night. It was incendiary—deliberately set. We found evidence that can't be doubted."

"Anne said, 'But who would set the fire?' And she instantly thought she knew. The belief was so sudden it had an impact that took her breath away. The fire could not be doubted."

"Certainly, Steve. Come into the lounge."

They went to the little bar, and she mixed him a cocktail. From her corner of her eyes she saw Eric across the room watching Steve with a dark intention. She also saw Rhea Marshall come up to the bar.

Rhea said, "Could I have a martini, Miss Lowry? A dry one?" Her voice was soft, but husky as with some strange emotion. She had approached from behind Steve, and her voice brought him swinging about. Anne could not see Steve's face then, his broad back being toward her, but she did see the way Rhea Marshall looked at him with a bright look in her eyes and a smile touching her lips. And she didn't like that. There was a moment of quiet that Anne static. Anne felt that she had said something.

She said, "Miss Marshall, this is Mr. Hayes."

And the dark-haired girl softly said, "An introduction really isn't necessary, Miss Lowry. Mr. Hayes and I know one another well. You see, I happen to be Mrs. Steve Hayes."

Bring Sun To Children Via Vitamin D

When "Old Sol" shines brightly overhead in the summertime, and lightly clad children spend hours out of doors nature's marvelous chemistry allows them to manufacture their own supply of the sunshine Vitamin D.

Vitamin D is essential for babies and children, for without it they cannot develop strong bones. Children who do not get enough Vitamin D develop bow legs and other symptoms of rickets.

Nutrition Services points out that in cities, where the air is filled with smoke and dust, the ability of the sun's rays to provide Vitamin D cannot be relied upon, as the health giving rays cannot penetrate the smoke screen.

Adults too, probably need Vitamin D, especially and nursing mothers certainly need it, for it helps to develop strong bones and teeth in the unborn baby and safeguards the mother's health.

Vitamin D, unfortunately, cannot be supplied in sufficient amounts from foods, but luckily fish liver oils supply it in abundance. That is why doctors prescribe cod, or some other form of fish liver oil for babies from the time they are a few weeks old. This should be continued through childhood and adolescence. It may be omitted during the summer months.

A Great Chinese

Dr. Sun Yat Sen Laid Foundations Of A Free China

Throughout Free China recently was celebrated the birthday of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, that great Chinese who organized the revolution which overthrew the corrupt and incompetent monarchy, who was the first president of the republic.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen was born Nov. 12, 1866, and died in 1925. His work then was accomplished in the sense that he had laid the foundations of a free and united China.

That his work was well done has been demonstrated by the skill, the vigor, and the inflexible will with which China has fought the Japanese aggressors for the past five years. It is shown also in the dignity and spirit of this new China, the determination of the Chinese people that they will deserve and retain the freedom won for them by the Father of the Republic—Ottawa Journal.
